What is constitution ?

Why do we need a constitution ?

If men were angels, no government would be necessary.

James Madison

Concept of State

An independent political entity occupying a “defined territory” the members of which are united together for the purpose of resisting external force and preservation of internal order

And the State needs certain instruments or organs to carry out its functions

Only for nagendrarajput9753@gmail.com

And there should be a law to:

- establish these organs
- lay down the powers of these organs;
- define the relationship between these organs
- their relationship with the citizens

That law is constitution

Only for nagendrarajput163@gmail.com

Constitution

It is a legal document that is a fundamental law of the country having a special sanctity. It sets out the framework and principal functions of organs of a State. It declares the principles governing the operation of those organs

- Provinces were to elect 292 members while the Princely States were allotted a minimum of 93 seats
- The seats in each Province were distributed among Muslims, Sikhs and general, in proportion to their respective populations

Objective resolution

- Jawaharlal Nehru moved the Objective Resolution on December 13, 1946 and that was passed on January 22, 1947. It was the expression to the ideals and aspirations of the people of India and so the objectives of the Constitution.

Objective resolution

The Objective Resolution read as follows: ⁴

Achievement called Indian Constitution

“With the adoption of the Constitution by the members of the Constituent Assembly on November 26, 1949, India became the largest democracy in the world. By this act of strength and will, Assembly members began what was perhaps the greatest political venture since that originated in Philadelphia in 1787”

Salient Features of Indian Constitution

Only for nagendraiput9153@gmail.com

1. A modern and a borrowed constitution

Only for nagendrarajput9753@gmail.com

“One likes to ask whether there can be anything new in a Constitution framed at this hour in the history of the world. More than hundred years have rolled over when the first written Constitution was drafted. It has been followed by many countries reducing their Constitutions to writing. What the scope of a Constitution should be has long been settled. Similarly what are the fundamentals of a Constitution are recognized all over the world. Given these facts, all Constitutions in their main provisions must look similar.

The only new things, if there can be any, in a Constitution framed so late in the day are the variations made to remove the faults and to accommodate it to the needs of the country. The charge of producing a blind copy of the Constitutions of other countries is based, I am sure, on an inadequate study of the Constitution. I have shown what is new in the Draft Constitution and I am sure that those who have studied other Constitutions and who are prepared to consider the matter dispassionately will agree that the Drafting Committee in performing its duty has not been guilty of such blind and slavish imitation as it is represented to be.”

Federalism

Only for nagendraiput9753@gmail.com

Essential Features of a polity of Federal Type

- Dual Government
- Distribution of powers
- Supremacy of constitution
- Rigidity of Constitution
- Independent Judiciary

Only for nagendra rajput9753@gmail.com

Benefits of Federalism

- Federation is suitable to a plural society with multiple cultures and multiple language speaking populations.
- It is more democratic in nature and facilitates people participation
- Checks the powers of the government
- Federal system allows distribution of responsibilities between center and states

“A serious complaint is made on the ground that there is too much of centralization and that the States have been reduced to Municipalities. It is clear that this view is not only an exaggeration but is also founded on a misunderstanding of what exactly the Constitution contrives to do. As to the relation between the center and the States, it is necessary to bear in mind the fundamental principle on which it rests. The basic principle of federalism is that the legislative and executive authority is partitioned between the center and the States not by any law to be made by the center but the Constitution itself. This is what the Constitution does.

The States, under our Constitution, are in no way dependent upon the center for their legislative or executive authority. The center and the States are co-equal in this matter. It is difficult to see how such a Constitution can be called centralism. It may be that the Constitution assigns to the center too large a field for the operation of its legislative and executive authority than is to be found in any other Federal Constitution. It may be that the residuary powers are given to the center and not to the States. But these features do not form the essence of federalism. The chief mark of federalism, as I said lies in the partition of the legislative and executive authority between the center and the Units by the Constitution. This is the principle embodied in our Constitution.”

Why did India chose federalism with a unitary bias

- GOI Act 1935 formed the basis of the Indian Constitution itself and had a strong unitary bias.
- Secessionist tendencies at the time of independence required a strong centre to hold the entire nation together.
- Several issues such as poverty, industrialization, infrastructure, etc. required a uniform approach.
- To protect India from acts of external aggression, a strong centre was needed.

Example of Switzerland

- Switzerland chose federal system as that suits its three language groups, German, French and Italian. It recognizes three official languages. Of the twenty two Swiss cantons, there are eighteen unilingual cantons, three bilingual cantons and one trilingual canton. The Swiss Constitution guarantees each citizen the right to communicate with the central government in any of the three official languages.

The curious case of Sir Ivor Jennings

In 1951 the University of Madras invited Jennings to deliver a series of lectures on the just born Indian Constitution.

The curious case of Sir Ivor Jennings

“Too long, too rigid, too prolix.” Over the course of three lectures, Jennings elaborated on his views.

*He focused on some primary aspects: The Constitution’s rigidity and its superfluous provisions; fundamental rights and directive principles of state policy; and, finally, key aspects of India’s federalism. Jennings finally handed down a largely unfavourable verdict. India’s Constitution, he declared, was “far too large and therefore far too rigid”, too caged by its history, and too unwieldy to be moulded into something useful through judicious interpretations. Overall, his judgment was that the Constitution would not endure.

And....

In the 1960s, the same Sir Ivor Jennings had been commissioned to write a new Constitution for Sri Lanka then known as “Ceylon”. Despite all precautions taken in its drafting, that Constitution lasted about six years.
